

A Day of Giving

On 21.12.12 , the day our beautiful world was supposed to end , we decided to spread the spirit of giving amongst those in need . Our aim was to establish the fact that as long as there is goodness on this Earth , there will be life and prosperity. Once we lose these values, our life becomes meaningless.

The venue of our event was in the city of Abu Dhabi , a 2 hour drive from Dubai , where I live. We visited a women's labour accommodation which housed several hundred of them. All of them worked as cleaners in various buildings , helping them to keep them clean and providing service with a smile.

Christmas for them would be very lonely as they had left their families back home in order to earn their living.

Our purpose was to serve those , who serve us ! We spent the afternoon packing the food and gift bags and as the sun set we drove to the camp.

We set up tables loaded with food , cakes and juices. While we served them, we sang carols to usher in the festivities. In between serving them, I played the guitar to liven up things.

There were surprise gifts for all them – these were mainly items which they wanted but did not spend money on.

It was a day for all of us to cherish and remember .
